Annie,

I know he have spoken on the phone in regards to this email. Since it is in writing, and for whatever reason it was sent to me, I need to respond in order to clarify the situation.

Our contact has been, is and will be strictly professional, and it is necessary for successful prosecution of these drug cases. I have never initiated contact in a personal nature nor do I intend to.

I know you have stated in voicemail as well as cellular phone conversation on 3-25-10, that this email was sent in regards to seeing whether someone is hacking into your email system, and for whatever reason it was sent to me.

I do not know anything about your family situation nor is something that is discussed in our conversations.

I need you to clarify this by responding to this email, because as it stands, the email that was sent to me, from whomever, leaves an impression or incinuates that I have attempted to have or had something more than a strictly professional working relationship.

I am not sure, nor do I want to know why I was sent this email, or whether I am in the middle of possible marital discourse, but I do not want to be.

I am very committed to my job and have been since day one, and I do not get involved personally with any potential or actual witnesses.

I need you to respond in writing confirming what I have stated, and what you have stated in voicemail, as well as cellular conversation, that the statements within the email are inaccurate and have no truth or bearing in my knowledge or involvement in your personal life.

I thought this important to send you this after I was able to view the email.

Everything that you know about me and my personal life is a lie.
I have lied to you about my marriage and my husband.
I will have no contact with you in the future.
